Since the beginning of my professional career, I was always between design and technology. I was growing in both areas - frontend engineering and ux design. After some time I took a hat of a product lead position. I've learned to work with customer feedback and scoping. On top of that, I started working with design systems which is my apple of the eye. Currently I'm concentrating mostly on frontend engineering. I love to share my experience with less experienced engineers. With my experience and knowledge, I'm able to feel comfortable moving around and understanding context of every stage of building a product and feature as well as leading, managing and building teams.
